

M.A. in Development Studies and Diplomacy

Program description

Politics, law, and human rights School

The program is an interdisciplinary and comprehensive program that will enhance students' knowledge in development studies, sustainability, and diplomacy, as well as provide them with the necessary soft skills for a successful international career in any of these areas of competence. Students will examine the various aspects of development, such as the environmental, social, economic, and human elements, as well as the philosophy and practice of diplomacy in the twenty-first century. Students will also participate in skill development seminars aimed at advancing their professional careers and employability. Prospective employers in this profession include governments, international organizations, development agencies, universities, and the business sector.

Modes for delivery

Online, Language of teaching is English

Duration

This is a full-time 12 months

Entry Requirements

A bachelor's degree or its equivalent from an Institution of Higher Education, as accepted by the University's Senate subject to a minimum of 5 years of working experience in a relevant field. English proficiency sufficient to meet the needs of the program

Program outcomes

The curriculum is intended to assist learners to master the theory and practice of development studies, international cooperation, and sustainable development, as well as evaluate many aspects of development. Apply key soft skills in an international working environment.

Program structure

Dissertation, core modules and learning model: This program includes a dissertation that counts for the degree credits.